Introduction

1. The Chairperson, Mr. Abdelmadjid Sidi Saïd, opened the meeting by welcoming the Director and all the members of the Committee, as well as the staff of the ILO Turin Centre. In particular, he welcomed Mr. Giacomo Barbieri to his first Trade Union Training Committee meeting as Manager of the Programme for Workers' Activities.
2. He remarked on the importance of this first meeting of the TUTC since the Joint Statement by the Employers' and Workers' Groups on the International Training Centre of the ILO had been submitted to the Governing Body in Geneva in March 2009. He also stated that at many meetings, both in Geneva and in Turin, the same problems were always raised about the funding of the Centre's activities and its full integration with ILO Headquarters. He pointed out that the time had come for a different vision of the future of the Centre, especially now that the voluntary contribution by the Italian Government had decreased and certain governments lacked motivation towards the Centre. He confirmed that the Committee was aware of the risks involved in a process of increasing privatization of the Centre. He stressed the importance of training offered by Turin to trade union organizations around the world. He therefore stated the need, during the next Governing Body meeting in November 2009, to present concrete proposals supported by pressure from the Workers' Group on the ILO decision-making process, without mincing words, in order to ensure a stable and predictable flow of resources to the Centre.
3. He recalled that, as mentioned in the Joint Statement by the Employers' and Workers' Groups, the Director of the Centre had been asked to submit a document to the Board of the Turin Centre in November 2009, outlining a coherent strategic plan of capacity-building for ILO constituents. The Workers' Group demanded to be part of that process. The Chairperson invited the Director to speak on behalf of the Centre.
4. The Director, Mr. François Eyraud, welcomed the new Committee and the new Manager of the Turin Programme for Workers' Activities. He thanked the Workers' Group for its continuous, strong, unqualified support. He reiterated that support to the Workers' Group was part of the mandate of the ILO and, for that reason, the Turin Centre attached great importance, especially in terms of financing, to ACTRAV's training activities.
5. He asked for comments by the Committee on the new programme on labour administration and inspection (LAB/ADMIN) which had been set up in Geneva. That programme could support the three constituents (employers, workers and governments) with probable additional resources.
6. The Director informed the Committee of the present financial situation of the Centre. He confirmed the cut in Italian funding for the next two years. Thanks to savings from the previous year and the end of the biennium, the situation for the current year seemed to be under control. The situation looked more problematic for 2010. He confirmed that if complementary funding could be found this year, the Workers' Activities Programme would benefit from it, as would happen with the RBSA resources.

7. He said that all staff at the Turin Centre highly appreciated the fact that, thanks to the Joint Statement by the Employers' and Workers' Groups, the ILO Regular Budget had seen an increase of 500,000 euros in the contribution to the Turin Centre. That decision was a clear signal that the Turin Centre was a high priority on the agenda of the ILO. Nevertheless, he pointed out that the Regular Budget of the ILO could not solve the financial problems of the ITC and that the real solution should be found through technical cooperation with funds that could compensate for the cut in the Italian contribution.
 8. He expressed his full understanding of the need to focus on ILO values, which was the Centre's mandate, and support activities, like those of the Workers' Programme, that were less attractive for market-oriented contributions. But that, he stated, must be within the framework of a decision by the Centre to respond to market-oriented demands as well.
 9. On the strategy paper that he had been asked to prepare in line with the Joint Statement by the Employers' and Workers' Groups, the Director stated that he hoped to have a first draft ready for the ILC, and that it would mainly lay the groundwork for discussions during the Board meeting in November 2009, when all the alternatives would be examined.
 10. The Chairperson thanked the Director of the Centre for his remarks, presented the agenda of the meeting and then gave the floor to the Director of ACTRAV Geneva to present the key points for discussion.
 11. The Director of ACTRAV Geneva, Mr. Dan Cunniah, thanked the Director for the overview of the financial situation of the Centre and his effort to mobilize resources for the Workers' Education Programme. He said that the Committee had met in the morning to brainstorm on the consequences and constraints that the changed financial situation could generate not only for the Workers' Programme but for the Centre in general. He said that the Committee had decided to complement the document that would be presented by the Director to the Board of the Centre with another document outlining the mid-term strategy on workers' education.
 12. On the mobilization of resources, he confirmed that, after the efforts to increase the contribution from the Geneva Regular Budget, it was clear that the only possibility was resources from technical cooperation. He stressed the importance of the initiative taken by the Workers' Secretariat to pull together employers and workers. Mr. Cunniah also pointed out that direct contributions from governments would be difficult because they already contributed to the ILO RB, the RBSA (Regular Budget Supplementary Account) and voluntary extra-budgetary resources. Therefore it would hardly be viable for them to contribute to a fourth line. He stated that part of the resources that the governments were contributing to technical cooperation should therefore be channelled to Turin. With regard to the RBSA, he affirmed that the authority to use this money was in the hands of the Regional Directors and Turin should adjust its strategy towards the Regional Offices. About extra-budgetary resources, which were decentralized and channelled through Decent Work Country Programmes, he said that without a training component for DWCPs being approved, the Turin Centre could face problems obtaining resources. Mr. Cunniah also stressed the importance of the Staff Development Fund, which amounted to 2% of the ILO budget, and the need to assess how much of this money was spent in Turin on staff training.

13. He said that in addition to the permanent contribution from the Regular Budget and the surplus at the end of the 2006-2007 biennium, ACTRAV Geneva was now initiating joint programmes with other departments that would bring training to Turin. They would include training for focal points in child labour and HIV-AIDS. He confirmed that ACTRAV Geneva would continue to try to mobilize resources for Turin, and also invited the ITUC and the ETUC to hold activities in Turin, while other trade union organizations were contributing in kind.
14. On the Programme's development, he emphasized the need to focus more on quality than on quantity, in order to have flagship courses that would raise the visibility of the Centre. He said that new activities and ideas for the Programme would come in the light of the Social Justice Declaration, from responses to the global economic and financial crisis and also as a consequence of the new Strategy Policy Framework of the ILO, which had just been adopted. He confirmed that the Programme would continue to focus on developing new training materials and online education materials.
15. Ms. Raquel Gonzalez, Secretary of the Workers' Group, said that the Turin Centre played a central role for the Secretariat of the Workers' Group, and stressed that training provided by the ITC-ILO had to remain centred on the mandate of the ILO and on the Decent Work Agenda. There was a need to emphasize the added value of the ILO, compared to other training institutions.
16. In relation to the financial difficulties that the Centre was facing, Ms. Gonzalez underlined that privatizing the Turin Centre's training and aligning the training programmes with the needs of the market was the wrong approach. She said that this would lead the Centre away from its mandate, away from training that was relevant and important to trade union organizations, and that it would make it more and more difficult for trade union representatives to attend training courses.
17. She pointed out the need to find a way to give effect to the recommendations in the Joint Statement by the Employers' and Workers' Groups, which came after at least two years' hard work by the GB and the PFA commission. Now, PARDEV needed to find a way of channelling more donor money to Turin, and the Centre needed to make proposals for accessing the Supplementary Account through a training component in DWCPs.
18. She stressed the importance of training trade union organizations in DWCPs in order to strengthen their capacity to be involved in the DWCP process and to negotiate the inclusion of trade union priorities and issues. She also asked for more resources specifically for that.
19. She described the difficulties in approaching governments, but she argued that there was room to channel more funds to the Turin Centre through voluntary contribution programmes, ideally not earmarked. She explained that many governments, including one sitting on the Board of the Centre, were happy with the Joint Statement by the Employers' and Workers' Groups after it had been distributed, and they had expressed their interest in the Turin Centre. Governments should be approached to check whether they were willing to put resources into the Centre's activities, integrating these approaches with increased pressure on Geneva to find ways to channel more resources to training in Turin.

20. She welcomed the fact that there would be a draft of the strategic paper available and ready for the ILC and she invited the Director of the Centre to draft it in consultation with the Manager of Turin's Programme for Workers' Activities.
21. On how to improve tripartism at the Centre, in terms of both quantity and quality, and on how to use the Central Fund to allow workers and employers to participate in other activities of the Centre, she reminded the Committee that tripartism was not only about numbers, it was also about including tripartism in the design, implementation and evaluation of courses and about identifying key courses to which workers and employers could add their perspectives. She asked that the Programme for Workers' Activities and the Programme for Employers' Activities be much more closely involved in the development of tripartite curricula and that they participate in the courses as resource persons.
22. Finally, Ms. Gonzalez recalled the urgency of stabilizing the European Desk post in the Programme for Workers' Activities this year.
23. The Secretary of the Committee, Mr. Giacomo Barbieri, stressed the urgency of taking action to avoid declining visibility of workers and employers at the Centre. Otherwise, the distance from the fundamental objective of integration with the ILO would increase. He also emphasized that the success of the Centre in marketing its products was linked to the label given by the ILO, which was the core added value of the Centre itself. He recalled that the time factor was important and that some of the recommendations in the Joint Statement by the Employers' and Workers' Groups had already been taken on board by the PFA and, therefore, only needed to be implemented.
24. He pointed out the importance of ACTRAV's contribution, which represented over one third of the amount of Regular Budget for Technical Cooperation (RBTC) coming to the Centre, and that it was the consequence of a decision taken by ACTRAV to move the educational committee to Turin and invest in the Centre. This good practice must be brought into the mainstream of the ILO's internal debate because not everybody at the ILO followed that approach.
25. He also recalled that the Workers' Programme was in the forefront of new experiences at the Centre, in distance education as in projects funded by external donor institutions. He asked for extra human resources for the training programmes of the Centre, especially as staff were retiring.
26. The Director of the Centre, Mr. Eyraud, replied by addressing the issue of financial and human resources in the training units and reassured the audience that the issue was of constant concern to the management, though there were certain limits to what was feasible. The auditors, for instance, each year recommended more staff for the Finance Department.
27. On the RBSA, he said that, as from next year, it would be possible to present global projects. He would like to see Turin included at that global level.

28. In relation to the governments that might provide direct resources to the Centre, Mr. Eyraud explained that this possibility had been explored many times without success. The only strategy was to reach the right political level with certain countries, like Italy, France, Spain and maybe Germany.
 29. On tripartism at the Centre, Mr. Eyraud agreed with the Secretary of the Workers' Group that there was room for improvement.
 30. On the European Desk, he reminded those present that it was not the best moment to create new posts, bearing in mind the financial difficulties that the Centre was facing, and he pointed out that the desk should be seen in a wider picture, linked with the strategy of ACTRAV, which was a regional one, and maybe a reinforcement of pedagogical capacity should be considered, too.
 31. On quality, the Centre was highly motivated to improve the quality of all training, not only the Workers' Programme, explained Mr. Eyraud, and a series of staff training courses sought to improve and refresh individual skills. Moreover, the Training Department had been strengthened to support the technical units better. Mr. Eyraud then invited the Workers' Programme colleagues to use DELTA to prepare and run its activities and to make use of the staff development programme.
 32. He said that he was surprised by Mr. Barbieri's statement on the possible decline in numbers of workers and employers at the Centre. His information was that the funds allocated to those two categories had not been reduced. He reiterated that it was not the intention of the Centre to reduce the importance of the Workers' Programme or the Employers' Programme, which it saw as strong pillars. There was a debate on the fact that certain Programmes contributed more than others to the functioning of the Centre.
 33. The Chairperson thanked the Director and gave the floor to the Secretary of the Committee to present the 2008 Programme.
 34. The Secretary also thanked the Director, the management of the Centre and the regional and technical managers for the support, advice and skills provided to the Workers' Programme, and introduced the report on activities in 2008. He pointed out the high quality and dedication of every person in the Turin Workers' Programme team, which had made his new duties easier to fulfil.
 35. The Chairperson thanked the staff of the Programme and the Secretary for the presentation and opened the discussion with the Committee.
 36. Mr. Guagping Jiang noted that Asia had been low in terms of both financial support for activities and number of participants. He asked for an effort next year to remedy that.
 37. Ms. Cinzia Del Rio expressed her concern over the Centre's role and the changing priorities. In the light of the joint declaration with the employers, she stressed the need to improve tripartite activities and, especially, bipartite activities, which added value to the Programme. She pointed out the need for strong political action by the Director and the management of the Centre to involve the Centre in devising programmes carried out in Geneva with donors, and in preparing technical cooperation programmes and DWCPs. She said that everybody was aware that it would be difficult to get more resources, partly because governments focused more on other international organizations, such as the World Bank, to tackle the consequences of the crisis. She asked the Director's opinion, as she was aware that there was resistance to the Turin Centre in Geneva.

38. Mr. Eyraud stressed that there were no changes to the priorities of the Centre. The capacity of the Workers' Programme had been reinforced, and if the reference was to the cut in the Central Fund Facility, this was only because fewer financial resources were available.
39. He explained that the strategy was to convince Geneva to give the Turin Centre, through the RBSA and as part of a global project, enough resources for the biennium to compensate fully for the reduction of Italian funding. That was what had been requested.
40. With reference to the World Bank, he said that the Centre was developing its relationship with the Employment Programme of the World Bank with the aim of reaching participants who otherwise would be unreachable. He gave the example of an activity on labour market information, organized in conjunction with the World Bank, whose participants had come from Ministries of Finance. That was a way to bring the ILO message to a different audience.
41. Mr. Cunniah thanked Mr. Barbieri for his presentation and for the changes that he had made to the report, which was now more user-friendly. Mr. Cunniah also thanked the staff of the Turin Workers' Programme for their efforts during the year.
42. He stressed the importance of the European Region, which had become the second largest region in terms of activities for ACTRAV. Because of its potential, a formal proposal to consolidate the European Desk position would be submitted to the Director at the end of the meeting.
43. Considering that the World Bank had already secured money for social protection, he asked the Centre to try to use that money for training, using the expertise of the ILO. ACTRAV was ready to assist in that process.
44. The Director of Training, Antonio Graziosi, explained that the Centre had increased its collaboration with the World Bank in two directions. One was with the World Bank Institute, which, for the Bank, was the equivalent of the Turin Centre to the ILO. The WB Institute, together with a German agency, INVENT, led a group of international development training institutions of which we were part. It was a very important multilateral forum that could channel the direction of international development training towards issues that were of concern to the ILO. He explained that the Centre was holding a first "learning week" in Turin, which would bring representatives of many international multilateral and bilateral training organizations to Turin to discuss issues of common concern. The Centre had also stepped up its dialogue with the technical departments of the WB and run a series of courses with them. The intention was to repeat that next year.
45. On the issue of tripartism and the Central Fund, Mr. Graziosi was very much in favour of the Fund. This year, due to problems raised by the Technical Programmes, and also by the Managers of the Workers' Programme and the Employers' Programme, the Centre had decided to revise the process and come up with a different strategy. The new focus was on fewer courses, with an equal number of worker and employer participants to guarantee a visible, explicit tripartite dimension. A check list had also been devised for activity managers, indicating what should be taken into account when designing a tripartite activity. Courses that received fellowships underwent more serious scrutiny. In addition, the Centre had now introduced a process called “peer review” on a pilot basis.

46. Mr. Graziosi pointed out that the Central Fund had expanded dramatically last year. This was mainly due to the need to speed up the delivery of Italian funds before they were cut. This year, there would be fewer funds available, due to two main circumstances: first of all, the Centre would like to test the new process and strategy adopted by the Central Fund; and secondly, with fewer captive funds it would be difficult to increase that type of facility. He argued that it was too soon to understand the impact that would have on the figures. On the other hand, the Centre had a variety of tripartite activities. The Centre would only be able to fully understand the impact of all the new instruments and strategies at the end of the year.
47. Mr. Graziosi stated that new curricula with a tripartite dimension had been developed and tested in very close collaboration with the ILO, for instance on CSR and on “green jobs”. The ILO response to the financial crisis was entirely tripartite and confirmed that whenever the opportunity arose, the Centre systematically followed a tripartite approach.
48. Cinzia Del Rio expressed her concern that certain European governments were pushing for the involvement of the World Bank because they were unwilling to address social conditions, as had emerged from the meeting the TU had had with the G8 and the G20.
49. The Chairperson pointed out that the very political nature of those sensitive issues was strictly related to the need for more coordination within the international trade union movement in the ILO. That, in itself, had consequences for Turin. If we wanted to have a stronger impact, the question of training for ILO constituents, especially for trade unions, its quality and the future of the Turin Centre itself should involve not only the small group of people forming the Turin Board but all the groups on the Governing Body. He suggested that at the meeting of the GB in November 2009, the Director of the Centre should address all the members of the Workers’, Employers’ and Government Groups to advocate broad consultation and deeper awareness of the issue. He then gave the floor to the Secretary of the Committee for a report on activities in 2009 and perspectives for 2010 and 2011.
50. Mr. Giacomo Barbieri pointed out that activities both in the field and at a distance would increase in 2009, and that, for the first time, a core course for the Europe Region had taken place. He also informed those present of the postponement of the second phase of the social security project for Latin America.
51. He also explained that if the Programme wanted to cover all the subjects in the mandate of the ILO, yet at the same time give more focus to specific issues within each core course, it would have to start covering the core contents of residential courses during a pre-course online phase. Consequently, core courses would become blended courses with a stronger mix of online and residential phases.

52. He pointed out that the Workers' Programme would like to draw on the recent experience of a tripartite course on wage policy to run a worker-specific activity.
 53. A decision was still pending on how and when training activities would accompany the topics discussed at the ILC, like domestic workers, which would be on the ILC agenda next year.
 54. He informed the Committee that an analysis of DWCPs to see if there were cross-cutting issues that could be addressed through training had begun. It would result in an increase in the capacity of the Programme to offer training to trade unions and to strengthen their involvement in the design, implementation and assessment of DWCPs.
 55. In 2009, the intention was to work on DWCPs to generate effective responses to the crisis and favour the inclusion of workers' priorities. The aim was to use the capacity of the Turin Centre to offer training on such priorities and make it possible to access RBSA funding.
 56. He illustrated some crisis response ideas such as including a module on the Declaration on Social Justice in all courses, and addressing key issues like social protection for all, with a special focus on the most vulnerable sectors of the labour market and on the reduction of inequalities.
 57. On the Programme's human resources, he reiterated the need to consolidate the European Desk position and to fill the vacant post that had originally been occupied by an information technology specialist and which called for training skills.
 58. Regarding tripartism and the changed role of the Central Fund, he wanted to work together with the Employers' Programme and Social Dialogue to broaden and improve tripartite courses at the Centre. This could be done, he argued, by analysing recent experience with CSR, green jobs, wage policy and crisis response, even though it was difficult to reconcile the demands of employers and workers with the decisions of the Technical Programmes concerned.
 59. He pointed out that the presence of Workers' Activities resource people in non-Workers' Activities courses was very low, even though it was a way to implement a tripartite approach at the Centre
 60. As to the strategic approach of the Programme, he noted that there was a need to have a medium-term planning capacity rather than a year-by-year one. Specific modules should be designed on specific topics to diversify and meet different needs. He stated that the Programme had started working in this direction on social security. He stressed the need for more permanent cooperation and a flow of information and participation among Turin, Geneva and the field experts. That was a pre-condition for proper medium-term planning.
 61. Mr. F. Eyraud reiterated the importance of the online part of courses and appreciated the willingness of the Programme to work more closely with the other Technical Programmes, in particular with DELTA.

62. Mr. Dan Cunniah acknowledged the effort made to move towards quality courses, but there was still much work to do. His major concern related to the standard courses, which were too general in nature and too diverse in content. The standard courses should be more specific and participants should be people who dealt with the issues concerned.
 63. He would like to see courses in 2010 which would provide skills and knowledge concerning trade union administration and organizing techniques. The Programme should provide high-level training with a number of standard courses for trade unionists on specific subjects.
 64. He asked for more information on how pre- and post-course online activities would be organized.
 65. The Chairperson pointed out that the Programme should slowly move towards regional courses, linked to the specific nature of each region. For instance, in the Arab Region, the crucial points would be migration, gender equality, tripartism and freedom of association.
 66. Ms. Raquel Gonzalez reiterated the importance of the Centre for the Workers' Group and the importance of the Centre focusing on the Decent Work Agenda. She noted that training in Turin should be better linked to the political work that the Group was doing in Geneva, and national centres should be helped to advance their political agendas through the training that they get in Turin. She submitted ideas about training activities for national centres with the aim of building capacity concerning the key elements in each strategic objective of the DWA - ones that the workers would like to include.
 67. She welcomed the idea of an inter-regional dimension in courses, in order to share good practice and experience. Topics could include: the employment relationship, wage policy, collective bargaining (based on the symposium to be held in October), globalization of industrial relations and trade union strategy towards multinational companies. She proposed organizing a joint Workers' Programme - Employers' Programme activity in 2010, bringing key people from the trade union movement together with employers for a brainstorming session.
 68. About training on ILC topics, she recommended focusing on what to do after the ILC, rather than focusing on what happens before the ILC, making sure that the outcomes are translated into action at the national level.
 69. Mr. Raghwan Raghwan stated that to plan activities better, more detailed knowledge of regional needs was needed. He pointed out that education was not only about sharing information but about providing skills that met the needs of trade union organizations. It would be useful to set objectives at regional level in order to assess better the impact of training on those organizations.
 70. Ms. Rabiadou Diallo stressed the importance of greater participation by women and young people in the courses. She welcomed the idea of improving the interaction between education and research, and suggested promoting wide dissemination of the contents and implications of the Social Justice Declaration

71. Mr. Guagping Jiang pointed out that the education programmes must promote the mandate and values of the ILO and meet the demands of the member organizations, but he also stressed the importance of constantly updating the contents of training, which should cover current topics and stimulate participants' interest.
 72. Ms. Cinzia Del Rio asked for clarification of how the training activities approached the trade union response to the crisis, of the procedures for selecting priorities given declining resources, and of the prospects of European projects being funded by the European Commission.
 73. The Secretary reacted to the comments from the Committee members and stressed the full commitment of the Workers' Education Programme to taking all those valuable contributions into account.
 74. The Chairperson then called on four Technical Programmes (EMLD, Social Protection, ILS and PRODEV) to present their activities to the Committee. After the presentations and the subsequent debate, he gave the floor to the Secretary of the Committee for the conclusions of the Committee meeting.
 75. The Secretary thanked the Committee for the fruitful meeting. He summarized the draft conclusions, which can be found in this report, and asked for the approval of the Committee.
 76. Mr. Eyraud, following the synthesis given by the Secretary of the Committee, expressed his satisfaction with the focus on collaboration with other units and quality of training, which was what made the difference. He supported Mr. Cunniah's idea of standard courses on trade union organization. Indeed, the Centre tried to have standard courses specific to each Technical Programme.
 77. On the upgrading of trade unionists' knowledge, Mr. Eyraud launched the idea of an event based on specific modules that the participants could choose according to their needs.
 78. He reiterated the importance of the support of the Centre to the Workers' Programme and to the training activities for trade unionists, and confirmed that the Centre would continue to work in that direction.
 79. The Chairperson also expressed his satisfaction with the meeting and thanked the Director and his staff for their active participation. He thanked the Workers' Programme team for its dedication and Mr. Barbieri for his innovative vision of trade union training.
 80. He thanked the members of the Committee, and Mr. Cunniah and Ms. Gonzalez, for their continuous support and, lastly, he thanked the interpreters. He then gave the floor to Mr. Cunniah and Ms. Gonzalez for final comments.
 81. Mr. Cunniah expressed his satisfaction with the meeting itself. He thanked Mr. Barbieri for the innovative approach to the management of this meeting. He found the presentations by the Technical Programmes very useful for him as well as for the members of the Committee. Those presentations should provide a background for their debate during the Board of the Centre. He thanked the Secretary of the Committee for drafting the conclusions of the meeting. He informed the Committee that coming personally to this two-day meeting together with the Secretary of the Workers' Group had demonstrated their link to the Programme and their willingness to improve its quality and visibility. For the staff of the Programme, it was true that it was very demanding, but they needed to be polyvalent. He then expressed his gratitude. He invited the staff of the Turin Workers' Programme to take part in staff development training to improve their competencies. ACTRAV staff in Geneva were also encouraged to participate in Turin courses in order to improve their knowledge. Finally, he thanked the members of the Committee, the staff of the Programme and other colleagues from the Centre who were present at the meeting.

82. Ms. Gonzalez thanked the staff of the Programme for the work they carried out. She wanted to point out that Esther Busser, who was not present this year because of other commitments, would most certainly participate next year. This practice had been initiated by Ms. Anna Biondi, former Secretary of the Workers' Group, and it was important that the two members of the Secretariat of the Workers' Group be present at this meeting because there were important links to be made with the Board meeting in November. She thanked the Director and the Director of Training once again for their continuous support.

Conclusions

83. Committee consensus was reached on the following points:
- a) Expressing its concern over the growing structural imbalance in the resources available for the Turin Centre after the decision of the Italian government to reduce its voluntary contribution.
 - b) Following up the joint Workers' and Employers' Declaration on the Turin Centre, the Committee asks the Director of the Centre to draw up a strategy document aimed at strengthening the integration of the Centre into the ILO, through enhanced reference to ILS and the values, principles and tripartite approach of the Organization.
 - c) Through consultation with the constituents, this document should emphasize the role of training in building the capacity of the social partners in the implementation of the Strategic Policy Framework and of the Social Justice Declaration with proposals for enhanced synergy between the Centre and the technical cooperation and other means of action of the ILO in order to mobilize more and predictable resources.
 - d) Continuing the development of a Centre policy on bi-tripartite courses with increased representation of social partners and mutually agreed curricula through stronger cooperation by the Programme for Workers' Activities with other Technical Programmes and a greater focus on the quality and added value of the tripartite contribution.
 - e) The Programme for Workers' Activities in Turin, in conjunction with ACTRAV Geneva and in consultation with the Secretary of the Workers' Group, should draw up a strategy paper on planning and provision of high quality training on the basis of the draft strategy paper discussed by the Committee and following up the conclusions of the 2007 ACTRAV Symposium.

- f) This paper should consider the provision of high quality training, balancing the quantity of activities with the need for time for staff development, reflection on the identity of core courses, with better setting of priorities through research and involvement of ACTRAV staff, in Geneva and in the regions, and in consultation with the Secretary of the Workers' Group.
- g) Improving the capacity to identify and meet training needs and mobilize resources through stronger integration with ACTRAV Geneva and regional workers' education specialists and the involvement of the trade union organizations at all levels, through the Secretary of the Workers' Group, and also through regular participation by the Turin Programme in ACTRAV TC programming, as its training component tool.
- h) Developing training courses based on curricula that focus more on specific issues, with the aim of implementing consolidated training processes with modules addressing diversified training needs at different geographical levels in each area of our Programme, including trade union administration and organization techniques.
- i) Making an effort to strike the right balance between Turin-based and field-based training activities, in collaboration with ACTRAV Geneva and field staff.
- j) Assessing the impact of training on organizations by strengthening the establishment of networks of focal points on the issues addressed by our training programme, such as child labour, HIV-AIDS and trade union rights.
- k) Exposing all regions as much as possible to core topics, such as the employment relationship, wage policies, collective bargaining and social security, and continuing to work on the agenda items of the ILC and the priorities of the ILO Workers' Group in order to offer training activities and contribute to the dissemination of knowledge and information.
- l) Developing a trade union manual on the Social Justice Declaration.
- m) Designing a programme to assist trade unions to integrate workers' priorities, based on the four pillars of the Decent Work Agenda, into DWCPs and into UNDAFs.
- n) Providing an appropriate number of interregional courses, taking into account costs and language limitations.
- o) Establishing and keeping up-to-date a list of resource persons for each issue relevant to Turin Workers' Activities courses, with more people from ACTRAV Geneva, the field, national and international trade union organizations and academia.

- p) Creating a permanent European Desk position within the Programme for Workers' Activities.
 - q) Following up activities in the Regions on labour education methodology and on the establishment of labour education systems, and continuing to improve the quality and innovation of our training methods as a core priority of our Programme.
 - r) Developing the Trade Union Information System (TUIS) database as an instrument for labour education as well as other activities, and improving our cooperation with the relevant Programmes of the Centre in the area of IT.
 - s) Continuing and expanding the development of training materials, with a greater focus on regular updating of the contents. Addressing issues other than the current core issues.

Opening remarks

1. Mr C. Renique, Chairperson, opened the meeting and presented the agenda. Given the time constraints, the Chairperson suggested opening the meeting by presenting the conclusions of the preparatory meeting of the Committee. These were the following:

The Employers' Training Committee (ETC) reviewed the 2008 activities of the Employers' Activities Programme. It finds its performance excellent, in both quantity and quality.

The ETC approves the work plan for 2009. Given the limited human resources available, it acknowledges with regret that further expansion in outreach is impossible and agrees with stronger accents being put on quality, innovation and the impact of the existing programme.

The ETC, however, has noted the high potential of the Programme for both employer constituents and donors, and its benefits for the ITC-ILO as a whole.

It calls upon the management of the ITC-ILO to allocate more financial and human resources to the Employers' Programme, to seize those opportunities and to secure stronger participation and training for the Employers' Group, which, as a full constituent of the ILO, should be on a par with the other constituents in benefiting from the ITC-ILO's capacity building.

In particular, the Committee insists that the project post, with joint financing from the central ITC-ILO resources and the Programme's projects, be extended for the coming years. The Committee also insists that a solution be found soon to replace the Professional post, whose occupant's secondment to the Programme ended at the beginning of 2009.

The ETC also expresses its concern about the future financing of the ITC-ILO as a whole. It recalls the Joint Statement by the social partners, made during the PFA Committee in Geneva in March 2009, which reiterated the strong support of the social partners for a sustainable future for the ITC-ILO. The Employers' Committee expresses its interest in being closely associated with the discussions on the future of the ITC-ILO with reference to the joint statement. The Committee expects involvement of the Employers' Programme and the Workers' Programmes of the ITC in developing a strategic plan of the ITC in Turin that should be drafted before the Board meeting in November.

The ETC invites the Programme and the ITC-ILO as a whole to explore in more detail a model of training that would multiply its impact. One approach could be to build partnerships with national organizations to reinforce training in a country or region, with more accent on training of trainers, dissemination of training material, etc.

The ETC welcomes the forthcoming tripartite training by the ITC-ILO on the economic crisis, its effects and measures to be taken. The ETC asks that the ACT/EMP Programme be actively involved in the course design. It also recommends that part of the course specifically target employers and their organizations, under the guidance of the Turin Employers' Programme.

The ETC requests that more attention be given to participation by employers in training by ITC-ILO units other than the Employers' Programme. To attain this objective, more attention should be given to shorter courses, with topics of relevance to employers, planned to allow sufficient time for organizations to select the right participants.

2. Mr F. Eyraud, Director of the Turin Centre, warmly welcomed the members of the Committee.

He drew the audience's attention to resources. An increase in the Italian voluntary contribution was unlikely to happen, he said. On the contrary, we had experienced a reduction (decided before the present financial crisis) and would aim at stabilization.

The Centre was going to face a difficult biennium, coinciding with the end of the ILO biennium. It should therefore maintain its standards but be prudent in planning.

Mr Eyraud also stressed the importance, for the Employers' Programme, of seeking alternative sources of funding to the Italian voluntary contribution, such as ILO ACT/EMP, other donor projects (the DECP, Spain, the European Commission) and employers' organizations in developed countries.

Mr Eyraud congratulated the Turin Employers' Activities team on the excellent growth in both quantitative and qualitative terms. He envisaged a further effort at stabilization, quality and strengthening the main product, the general course on effective employers' organizations. He suggested continuing collaboration with other units, like DELTA, to further develop the training-of-trainers courses and improve learning methodology.

3. Mr A. Graziosi, Director of Training Programmes, joined the Director in congratulating the Turin Employers' Activities Programme together with ACT/EMP Geneva and the IOE.

Mr Graziosi analysed the business model of the Centre, which was based, he said, on a strong ILO focus in spite of a relatively low ILO financial contribution (22% in 2007, but estimated at less than 20% in 2008), compensated for by a significant Italian voluntary contribution, which had in the past been flexible and permitted an allocation of resources in accordance with the ILO's strategic priorities and emerging demands.

In his opinion, in view of a relatively predictable 2009 and a more difficult 2010, the Centre could benefit from the ILO assigning slippage resources to its activities this year, thus enabling the Centre to re-programme some Italian funds in 2010.

More broadly, he envisaged deeper involvement of the Centre in the planning and design of ILO operational objectives.

Mr Graziosi went on to examine the visibility and participation of employers' representatives in courses run by other units within the Centre, which fell in 2009, compared to 2008.

Participation by the social partners, he said, was linked to the resource mobilization process and had been influenced by the increased submission of employer-specific or worker-specific projects, which had resulted in less participation in tripartite courses.

4. Mr Renique gave the floor to Mr. A. Moore, who underlined the importance of considering training as the Centre's core business for employer, worker and government representatives.

He asked for clarification of the strategy on the use of savings within the organization, of any plan to cut staff to overcome financial difficulties, and of the fixed-cost system.

5. Mr D. Arrigotti, Deputy Director of the Centre, took the floor to respond and appreciated the relatively limited cut in the Italian voluntary contribution to the Centre compared to the general reduction in Italian funds for technical cooperation. The Centre remained the second main receiver of an Italian voluntary contribution, after the UNDESA, he said.

Concerning measures to face the crisis, Mr Arrigotti pointed out that the trend was to move staff from administration to training programmes whenever possible. However, if there were significant staff cuts, training unit staff would also be affected.

Concerning the fixed costs of the Centre, mostly salaries, Mr Arrigotti stressed that big efforts had been made to reduce them and obtain good value for money. Nevertheless, security and occupational safety and health were areas where costs could not be reduced without infringing decent work conditions for staff.

6. Mr. A. Dahlan drew attention to alternative ways to create income, from a business perspective. He wondered whether research and publications for employers, workers and governments could attract additional funds.
7. Ms J. Mugo pointed out that organizations were as strong as their staff, and reiterated the request to maintain the project-based professional post within the Turin Employers' Activities Programme. She said that the ILO should increase its financial contribution to the Centre as part of its long-term financial planning.
8. Mr Eyraud confirmed the management's willingness to maintain the professional project post within the team and underlined the importance of the ability to work in the three official languages of the ILO. He also indicated that the Turin Centre should have access to technical cooperation resources like the RBSA.

Responding to Mr Dahlan's question, the Director noted the importance of having a business perspective. However, he also underlined the Centre's continuous need to strike a balance among those activities that were very relevant to the ILO objectives but less marketable and those that were less relevant but more attractive on the market.

9. Mr Graziosi commented that, apart from fixed contributions, the Centre dealt with several projects case by case, but they did not represent structural funding.

Although there were several different views of the future of the Centre, he said, the management was not pessimistic.

Conclusions and closing remarks

10. Mr C. Renique appreciated the reiterated willingness of the management to maintaining the Turin Employers' Activities Programme capacities, and called the meeting to a close at 11.35.
